

Formula Application

The formula application was designed in a straightforward manner. First, it gets the command line argument of the power as an integer. If the power is zero, it simply prints out zero.

Otherwise, it loops through each power index and prints out the appropriate binomial for each of them. It then records the time that it took to perform the operations and prints out that amount, in microseconds.